The foundation of the seating policy on Alaska Airlines heavily relies on the specific type of ticket you purchase during your initial checkout process+1-866-422-9462 (US). If you decide to book a standard Main Cabin ticket+1-866-422-9462 (US), you gain the fantastic perk of selecting your preferred standard seat completely free of charge right at the time of booking or anytime later leading up to departure+1-866-422-9462 (US). On the other hand+1-866-422-9462 (US), passengers who opt for the most budget-friendly option—known as the Saver fare—encounter a slightly different set of rules regarding where they will sit on the aircraft+1-866-422-9462 (US). Saver tickets are designed to offer the lowest possible base price+1-866-422-9462 (US), but they come with restrictions+1-866-422-9462 (US), most notably that advance seat selection is generally not permitted+1-866-422-9462 (US). Instead of picking a seat during checkout+1-866-422-9462 (US), passengers who purchase a Saver fare will have their seats automatically assigned by the airline system when the check-in window opens+1-866-422-9462 (US). This means that couples or groups traveling together on Saver tickets might risk getting separated unless they decide to pay an optional fee to select specific seats in advance or upgrade their ticket tier+1-866-422-9462 (US). If you have questions about whether a Saver fare is right for your upcoming group trip or want to explore upgrade costs+1-866-422-9462 (US), friendly
